2. Summary of duties

The Open University Business School is recruiting a Senior Lecturer/Lecturer in Management in the Department of Public Leadership and Social Enterprise (PuLSE). The position offers the opportunity to be part of a vibrant, inter-disciplinary research culture and community, and to develop expertise in online and distance learning. More detail about the department and the research centres is given below through the web links provided.

The successful candidate will have a good research track record appropriate to the stage of their career and the motivation to maintain a continuing research contribution in the research areas of the department. The successful candidate will contribute to our ongoing research in one of more of the research areas covered by the department:

- Business ethics, corporate social responsibility and sustainability
- Inter-organisational collaboration and collaborative governance
- Public and Voluntary Sector Leadership and Management
- Social enterprise and entrepreneurship

There is the opportunity to contribute to research within one or more of the existing inter-disciplinary research centres hosted by the department:

- Public Leadership and Collaborative Governance in the Strategic Research Area of Citizenship and Governance.
- Centre for Policing Research and Learning
- Centre for Voluntary Sector Leadership (CVSL)

The appointee will participate in the design, development and delivery of state-of-the-art online distance learning materials across the business and management curriculum, appropriate to their areas of expertise. The appointee will have excellent communication and inter-personal skills. The successful candidate will also have experience in innovative ways of working, along with an ability and willingness to work in non-standard ways. Experience of or an interest in practice-based pedagogy, blended and online teaching and learning and action learning are also required.

The successful candidate will be required to:

- contribute to undergraduate and postgraduate degrees by working on the development and presentation of one or more of our modules;
- conduct research which will enhance the research profile of the Business School and the Department;
- contribute to the development of tutors and support of students;
- be responsive to multimedia developments within the OU;
- play a full part in the academic life of the Business School, which is located on The Open University’s Walton Hall campus in Milton Keynes; and
- serve as requested on Business School, Faculty and OU committees.

5. About the unit/department

The Department for Public Leadership and Social Enterprise (PuLSE)

The Department of Public Leadership and Social Enterprise (PuLSE) is a thriving, inter-disciplinary department, committed to generating public and social value through the impact of research, policy and practice in the areas of:

- Business ethics, corporate social responsibility and sustainability
- Inter-organisational collaboration and collaborative governance
- Public and Voluntary Sector Leadership and Management
- Social enterprise and entrepreneurship
We aim to combine a critical understanding of leadership and management with practical relevance and close collaboration with practitioners. Our reputation and success is manifested in our contribution to the work of three research centres:

Citizenship and Governance— is a strategic research priority of the University, with funding from the University to support research in six streams: collaborative and inclusive governance; digital participation; faith and law; justice, borders and rights; private lives and public intimacies; and public leadership and management. The two streams of collaborative and inclusive governance, and public leadership and management are led from the Department.

Centre for Policing Research and Learning— led by Prof Jean Hartley, aims to improve policing through a wide range of courses and qualifications, and problem-solving research

Centre for Voluntary Sector Leadership (CVSL)— led by Prof Siv Vangen, provides voluntary sector organisations with access to free leadership development modules and research-led insight

Much of our research concerns innovative forms of organisation and financing – such as social enterprises, mutual and social investment, and commissioning – which offer new ways of tackling social, economic and environmental problems and in turn, trigger the need for new sorts of knowledge and skills in public, private and third sector organisations. We carry out rigorous and relevant research designed to understand and address these emerging challenges.

The Department’s interdisciplinary and cross-sectoral perspective on leading, managing and organising is also reflected the work of our postgraduate research students. The Business School has a strong community of research students on its full-time PhD programme. PuLSE currently has about 15 PhD students working on a variety of topics related to our four research areas and three research centres.

Faculty of Business and Law

The Faculty of Business and Law is one of the four faculties of The Open University. It brings together two Schools – The Open University Business School and The Open University Law School – and has a vibrant and supportive research culture and a strong reputation as a high-quality and innovative provider of management and legal education. We support staff to conduct internationally excellent and impactful research through dedicated research time, a collegial and supportive research culture, including four established interdisciplinary research centres, seedcorn funding for research projects and an excellent research support infrastructure. Our research has impact in diverse areas of public life, such as public policy and management, policing, the voluntary sector, the public understanding of finance, or social marketing.

Our courses and qualifications are studied by a wide range of people from all backgrounds – we are proud to promote opportunity and social justice by making higher education open to those unable to attend a more traditional campus-based university. Student satisfaction is a high priority and we are determined to deliver the best outcomes for everyone studying with us. Our students return some of the highest satisfaction scores in the National Student Survey – they have ever since the NSS began.

Around 35,000 students are currently enrolled on our business, management and law programmes; about quarter of them are based outside the UK in 80 countries. The majority of our students are employed and study part-time with us.

The Faculty employs around 130 academic staff and approximately 700 Associate Lecturers. Around 80 academic-related and administrative members of staff support the Faculty.
We are committed to developing our staff to achieve their full potential and offer a range of formal and informal training and development opportunities to support individual and Faculty objectives.

The Open University Business School

Founded in 1983, The Open University Business School holds a unique position as the leader in flexible, accessible and high quality business and management education. We are recognised for the quality of our programmes, the excellence of our teaching and the impact of our research. The School is one of an international elite group of institutions to have triple accreditation by EQUIS, AACSB and AMBA. We are also a member of the Global Business School Network – an organisation working with top international business schools to build management education capacity in the developing world.

The School has four cross-disciplinary academic departments: Public Leadership and Social Enterprise; Strategy and Marketing; Accounting and Finance; People and Organisations. Each department includes academics, visiting experts, research staff and postgraduate students. The result is a dynamic, collaborative approach to research and programme development that is engaged with the needs of commercial, public and third sectors in the UK and internationally.

Research within the Business School combines intellectual rigour and innovation with practical relevance. Its academics have substantial experience working jointly with organisations in all sectors of the economy and directing their findings to influence management thinking and practice. There is an active PhD programme with around 50 PhD students. Since first entering the Research Assessment Exercise (RAE) in 1996, The Open University Business School has increased its research capability significantly, with external awards from Economic and Social Research Council, Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council, Design Council, European Union, the private sector and internal sources. The 2014 Research Excellence Framework (REF) results show the high quality of the research outputs and impact of the School’s research. The School ranked 34th overall placing it in the top third of UK Business Schools. For impact, the School was placed 16th overall, indicating not only the excellence of the research but also its influence and relevance to user communities in all areas from practice to policy.

The School offers a wide range of undergraduate, postgraduate, doctoral and executive education programmes. We also make a considerable amount of learning material available for free through The Open University’s own open educational resources platform OpenLearn and popular social media such as iTunesU and YouTube, and as part of FutureLearn – an (Open University owned) international university collaboration to bring online learning to a global audience.
