The Living Multiculture project (ESRC ES/J007676/1) comes to the end of its funded life on 31st October 2014. To mark this phase of the project finishing and its next phase of dissemination and public engagement beginning, the research team would like to take this opportunity to present some of the work of the project and share its key findings with you. We have organised this event in ways that connect the Living Multiculture project with the wider sociology, geography and policy communities. We are therefore delighted to have Omar Khan (Runnymede Trust), Anoop Nayak (University of Newcastle), Ben Rogaly (University of Sussex) and Amanda Wise (Macquarie University) joining us as keynote speakers at the event. We also see the day as a way of welcoming your thoughts and listening to your responses. We very much look forward to seeing you on the 22nd October.

Living Multiculture Team: Sarah Neal, Katy Bennett, Allan Cochrane, Giles Mohan.
